interiors + design

for sale

April 16, 2013

Have you ever walked into a home and thought, “Where is the add to shopping cart button?” Dering Hall is making our dreams a reality; their latest collaboration with Los Angeles designer Tim Campbell will put your fantasy home pieces on sale. New York’s swanky West Village is home to the iconic Printing House (complete with its pre-war architecture), where Campbell has designed a two-story, two-bedroom residence fit for anybody who enjoys a timeless, beautiful design aesthetic. The dream space features products from companies all over the world and Dering Hall is going to carry over 30 pieces featured in the home for you to purchase, including fabric, furniture and lighting. Those familiar with the work of Tim Campbell know his unprecedented ability to transform rooms into upscale visions and his work for Dering Hall is no exception. “This project has all the components to support the kind of interior design I love best: historically significant architecture respectfully melded to a contemporary renovation. It is my dream New York home come to life.” The doors open on April 16 and, along with the products, will remain available until January 2014, when the apartment changes hands to another one of our favorite designers!
